PhD IN POPULATION HEALTH
CONFERENCE TRAVEL GRANT

The PhD in Population Health program recognizes the importance of sharing the research findings with the broader scientific community. The program conference travel grant is intended to cover the cost of transportation (train, plane, bus, or other), and at the most economical rate possible, conference fees, accommodation and meals.

Admissibility
Students must first have received funds from the FGPS conference travel grant. If you have received funding from the FGPS you are eligible for the program contribution. There are no forms to fill out for the program contribution.

Value
The program normally grants an amount equal to the FGPS with a maximum of $500.

Contribution from your supervisor
Your supervisor should also make a financial contribution.

Procedure
Complete the FGPS Application for a conference travel grant and submit to the program office. The program will complete the section on Financial contribution and then will submit to the FGPS.

After the conference
1. Complete the FGPS Request for reimbursement of travel expenses form.
2. If your supervisor has made a financial contribution submit your request to his department and bring a copy of the reimbursement form to the program office.
3. Submit all original receipts to the program office. The program office is responsible for completing the request for reimbursement for the program’s contribution. You will be asked to sign this form when completed.

Last update: February 2014