From the Vice-Dean's Corner:

In the Research Office, we are committed to helping researchers to prepare the strongest possible grant applications, particularly those submitted to Tri-Council and similar agencies. We are continually updating and deepening our knowledge about review processes for these agencies and building appropriate supports. We are investigating ways of improving internal mentorship and review that could possibly include more formal programs, such as those used in some other Faculties. Ideas include doing concept testing (or "chalk-up") sessions, where a researcher can pitch an idea to a group of peers and describe how it might fit into a particular funding opportunity. Group members would ask some of the important questions that can help researchers to frame their thinking, challenge assumptions, and identify gaps in the proposal. In addition, we are investigating the feasibility and usefulness of establishing an electronic inventory of successful grant applications, similar to those available to researchers at some other U15 universities. Your comments and suggestions are most welcome, especially at this time, as we approach the autumn application season.

Let me end with an important reminder to take advantage of our internal funding opportunities, wherever possible (<https://health.uottawa.ca/research/funding>). Your Research Committee has worked hard to develop them to meet the priorities that researchers have identified to date.

Warmest wishes for the summer,

Jeff
