Vice-Dean's Corner

On Friday, April 26th, the University of Ottawa hosted a panel discussion in celebration of World Intellectual Property (IP) Day, a global celebration led by the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO). Every year, on that date, WIPO highlights the role that IP rights play in encouraging innovation and creativity. It is also an opportunity for IP offices, inventors and enterprises to connect with each other and discuss how IP contributes to the flourishing of innovations that shape our world and improve the way we live. This year the theme was "Reach for Gold: IP and Sports" understanding intellectual property and using it strategically in sport-related business can lead to success and growth. A featured panelist was our own Blaine Hoshizaki, director of the Neurotrauma Impact Science Laboratory. The event should stimulate FHS researchers to consider whether, perhaps without realizing it, their work may be creating IP assets that should be protected. The Research Office would like keep better track of IP issues for our Faculty. Please help by emailing us your answers to this short survey:

1. Is intellectual property (IP) generated from any of your research projects? Yes or No
2. If you answered yes, please tell us what kinds of ideas or products you have identified as IP.

Send your answers to us at: fssrecherche@uottawa.ca

If you do not know if you have IP that is worth protecting, you can find out by contacting Innovation Support Services at:

Warmest wishes,

Jeff
